NO ORDERS YET FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE DAY

National Defense Day, Sept. 12, when citizens will be given an opportunity to witness the mobilization of armed forces, is expected to be celebrated in Janesville by considerable activity, this being the home of the tank corps of the 32nd division of the Sixth Army corps.

No orders relative to plans have been received thus far from general headquarters by Capt. Perle Grim-shaw. It is, however, expected that they will be forthcoming within a few days.

Information concerning general plans have, however, been received by Capt. Grimshaw as an officer in the reserve officers corps. There are several former World War officers in Janesville who are in the reserve corps and would be subject to call at a moment's notice. Few persons know that the United States has an army at all, and that it could be pressed into immediate service, upon an emergency.

CHAMPIONS' FLAGS AWARDED SCHOOLS

Kiwanis Club Presents 1922 and 1923 Playground Banners at Programs.

Playground championship pennants flow from the flag-poles of two schools for the first time Wednesday afternoon, when presentation of the Kiwanis banners for 1922 and 1923 were made to the Jefferson and Adams schools by Dr. L. J. Woodworth, representing the Kiwanis organization.

More than 200, most of them children, were present for the presentation ceremonies at the Adams school grounds at 3 p. m., when the high school band under the direction of
C. Jack, the director, Arthur Wheeler, and the speaker arrived.

Kiwanis took playgrounds.
Recognition of the value of supervised play has been one of the outstanding ideas of the Kiwanis club for some time. Dr. Woodworth said, and it is with the intention of encouraging the work that they award a banner to the school winning the greatest number of points, based on attendance and excellent in athletic and other activities, each year. He praised the schools for their good results and urged them to continue to strive for the pennants. "The worth of the token, is not in its actual value, but in the competition which results in its being awarded. It represents the school's effort to win the honor of all the children of one section of the city, and in that way discourage the school spirit which is awarded as the result of the efforts of an individual or a small group."

Two boys enrolled at the Adams playground, Herman Mahan and Fred Ward, were given the honor of hoisting the flag to the top of the pole at their school.

American flag to Jefferson.
Briefly reviewing the history of the American flag, and the inter-which the society she represented had in keeping alive the spirit of patriotism, especially among children, Mrs. J. H.
Harris, president of the Ladies of the G. A. R., presented a large American flag to the Jefferson school. It was accepted by Walter Lane, director of the playgrounds there, and presented to the flag pole on top of the building, while the band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

The American flag, Mrs. Harris said, is the oldest in the world, having been officially adopted in 1776. She told of the familiar incidents of its early history, and how the stars were added, one by one. She was introduced by Mrs. D. W. Jones, president of the board of education, who spoke briefly on the appreciation of school officials for the efforts of the Ladies of the G. A. R. and other patriotic orders for aiding in patriotic instruction of children.

First Flag in County.
Mrs. Flingin gave a talk on how the first flag in Rock county was made. She said that in 1776, when the first flag was made there, it was made by Mrs. Simmon, who tore up a blanket and used it for the material.
Mrs. Johnson, thanked the Kiwanis club, in behalf of the board of education, for the interest it has taken in supervising play, and spoke of the advantages of the board believes are derived from it.

More than 1,000 were present at the five grounds during the afternoon
Wednesday, with fully 500 at the Jefferson and Adams schools, where the programs were given. There were 150 at the Webster, 125 at the Washington and 75 at the Douglas. Refreshments were served at each of the schools and the high school band gave a half hour concert.

Transportation for the band was furnished by Philip Doherty and L.
J. Stewart.

W. H. Kelly, Milton, reported to the police Thursday the theft of a 1924 Ford touring car Wednesday night at the carnival grounds near the Milton avenue city limits line. Police of surrounding cities have been notified.

RAILROADS WILL REPAIR CROSSINGS

Will Replank Five Points and Academy Instead of Putting in Cement.

The Academy, Pleasant and Race street railroad crossings will be repaired this summer, probably during August, by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and Chicago and Northwestern roads.

This promise was made City Manager Henry Traxler Wednesday in Chicago following a conference with engineers of the railways. The Race street crossing will be paved with brick and the other two crossings laid with new planks.

The road engineers declared that experts had proven that over main line crossings, wooden planks are superior to other types of pavement. Due to the fact that the Academy and Pleasant street crossings are on the main lines of the roads a different situation developed, according to the engineers. The roads were determined to keep traffic over the lines operating and felt that no soft type of pavement would be satisfactory. The expense of the heavy type of pavement was considered for some time, but it was felt that the type was impractical.

The Milwaukee road was represented at the conference by C. F. Leach, chief engineer, and the Northwestern by W. J. Towne, chief engineer. Both men promised that the work would be started just as soon as the weather permitted.

It may be necessary to reduce the grade somewhat at the Pleasant street crossing, but no serious improvement is expected. The improvement will be made in the line of motor traffic and pedestrian travel.

JUDGE OVERULES
PLEA FOR JURY ON INSANITY EVIDENCE

for Leopold and Loeb joining them. The demonstration faded quickly under the frown of Judge Caverly.

State in Final Plea. The state had reached the final stage of its case when the opinion of the court record the opinions of attorneys on the mental responsibility of Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, which the afternoon session heard.

Thomas Marshall, legal expert for the state's attorney, started at that hour to sum up the case. He presented evidence which he had presented to Judge John R. Caverly throughout a day and a half of court session.

The state was maintaining that testimony by attorneys could be heard only on the question of insanity, which problem, it admitted, could be decided by a jury on a piece of not guilty. The defense was resting on its contention that a condition of mental disease short of insanity could be considered in mitigation of punishment.

Charles S. Darrow, started the answer of the defense after Mr. Marshall had summed up in a few sentences.

"I have never seen such enthusiasm for the death penalty as in this case," said Mr. Darrow. "I thought that the state would favor it, but I have no such feeling. They were decided here ten years ago. I am not here to argue that the mind was, or more appropriate, what it was not."

"These cases were read with no purpose but to pile up law books and anybody can do that."

"There is no question but that the Illinois legal insanity law makes one unable to distinguish or choose between right and wrong," said Mr. Darrow. "I added that matter was no claim that Leopold and Loeb were legally insane."

Mr. Darrow asked a snicker in the crowded court room by saying that Robert B. Crowe, attorney for the state, had said that Mr. Darrow's clients "are even as sane as he is."

"Courts today take account of mental deficiency," he said. "Mr. Darrow touched upon the youth as a mitigating circumstance, saying: 'The reason for this and the lack of discretion and mature judgment that comes with age. It is recognized in all our laws affecting minors.'"

Mr. Darrow talked rapidly, with flashes of wit and humor, and his case, emphasizing his argument for the locality of his own stand. His eye glasses, some times held before his eyes as he peered at brief notes, were often raised high above his head as he gestured.

Again his voice would be raised, his glasses tossed rattling on the document table and his head as he denounced the state's insistence on the death penalty.

Start Row Again

Chicago—The hearing before Judge John R. Caverly to determine the fate of Nathan Leopold, Jr., and Richard Loeb, kidnapers-slayers of a young boy, opened at 10:30 a. m. today with an increased and clamorous plea for mercy to the trial court room.

Thomas Marshall, indictment and legal research expert for Robert B. Crowe, state's attorney, led up to the hearing by saying that the state had other commonwealths to prevent Judge Caverly hearing as a mitigating circumstance the testimony of various witnesses called by the defense.

A joke breezed across over night and the day promised to be the first cool enough for comfort, since the hearing opened eight days ago.

William A. White next climbed into the witness chair as the session opened.

Caverly's Decision. Judge Caverly told the prosecution that all the cases cited yesterday were cases in which a plea of not guilty had been entered and the cases cited by the state and therefore they were not applicable in the present instance. The court cited a Pennsylvania decision which held that a plea of insanity in mitigation of punishment had been heard by that court.

Judge Caverly said that in the Pennsylvania case it was held that a plea of guilty automatically made the crime second degree murder. He said it was held that the state might then introduce testimony to mitigate the offense to first degree murder.

"Well, we have raised the offense in this case," interjected Robert B. Crowe, state's attorney, "and understood."

"I just wished to make that point clear," said the court.

Charles S. Darrow, chief counsel for the defense, then made a final plea upon the arguments as to admissibility of insanity testimony.

Mr. Marshall insisted that the state did not object to presentation of athletes' testimony as such. Analyzing the present situation, he said that the mental disease testimony that the defense was offering was "legal insanity" besides responsibility for crime," he said. "First then, they plead guilty, acknowledging guilt responsibility, then offer in mitigation of punishment testimony which tends to remove that responsibility."

He emphasized again that the question of sanity is one for a jury to determine.

Dr. J. J. Thorne, Beloit, and Dr. J. J. Thorne, Janesville, won honors at bridge, while Dr. H. C. Kasten of Beloit, shot a 103 in 18 holes of golf for the low score. Dr. A. C. A three course dinner was served on the porch of the country club, followed by an address by Stephen Bolles, editor of the Gazette, who was introduced by Dr. Thomas J. Snodgrass, of Janesville. Music for the dinner and dancing that followed was furnished by a four piece orchestra.

Dr. Gerald K. Woolf had charge of the golf tournament, and Dr. Mrs. W. H. McGuire of the bridge game.

Mr. Bolles gave the only address of the evening, speaking on "Is This a Sick and Ailing World?" which he answered in the negative.

Among other things Mr. Bolles said: "A few days ago there died in Boston a man who had talked with a man who in turn had talked with Peregrine White, the first white child born in the United States. He was the last of a race to place in the homes of the ordinary citizen the luxuries that in the days of Peregrine White were only for the very rich or the nobility in mansion houses."

"We have slain thousands, but Pestilence hath taken its hundreds of thousands" is the wall of a stricken people since across the world calls for the services of the most able diagnostician. It is sick with a chronic and therefore incurable malady or it is suffering from an acute attack of anemia, indigestion, or is nervous or prostrated with neurasthenia and hallucinations?"

Just as we have made mistakes in medicine, just as we have false teachers in religion, just as we have shyders among lawyers, just as we have grafters in public life, so we have quacks in politics and sociology and government."

"We are in a traffic jam of laws and prohibitions and commands so conflicting and numerous that we find it impossible to keep them."

"I am inclined to believe that the world is not so sick as that its condition is a state of mind."

"One of your own great physicians said: 'We have not only multiplied diseases, but we have made them more fatal.'"

"So it seems that we have multiplied the troubles of the world and some of the troubles have become fatal when heretofore they were not even alarming."

"We are sick from eating too much and making of laws. They are divided in three classes, those necessary and those which are either superfluous or ignored."

"Some of us have arrived at the point where we think a youth fresh from high school could write a better constitution than the one we have."

"It has taken thousands of years to come from the barbarism of yesterday into the sunlight of today—from savagery to civilization."

"It has taken mankind all these hundreds of centuries to learn how to live as well as to know how to die. I should rather be the one to teach how to live than to teach how to die."

"The world may have its ailments, but we need not diagnose a stone bruise or assume that our troubles are an epidemic of small pox."

"The greatest command of all by the Greatest Commander was to heal the sick."

Hours of Register—Commencing Friday, and during the month of August the office of the register in probate, of the Rock county court, will be open only from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. The register is in accordance with custom, Judge Charles L. Pfeiffer now being on his vacation.

The Binder Twine Trust.

Talking may be a popular method of securing attention. The attorney general of the United States has a better way. He acts. The suit brought by him against the so called Binder Twine Trust, is evidence of his activity. When he was appointed to his present place some of the senators of the United States were calling attention to that fact that Mr. Stone was a corporation lawyer. But he has not failed to bring action because of these charges which were only gestures at best. No article enters so much into the harvesting of grain as binder twine. Every bundle is tied with it. Such vast quantities of it are used that if the "trust" puts up the price of its product one cent a pound, as it has occasionally done, a tribute of $3,000,000 is thereby automatically laid on the American farmer. Nor is there apparently any way out of the application of this thumb-screw on our farmers except the breaking up of the combination that controls the product. Not long since there was a surplus of sisal hemp, which comes mostly from Yucatan, and wholly from outside the country but it is alleged that immediately a new corporation was organized which took entire charge of the surplus and actually raised the price to the farmers instead of giving them a decrease in the price, which should have been the logical result of the existence of the surplus.

How strongly entrenched such an alleged monopoly can be is indicated by the list of defendant corporations named in the suit which Attorney General Stone has instituted. They are the Equitable Trust Company, the Sisal Sales Corporation, the Royal Bank of Canada, the Interstate Trust and Banking Company of New Orleans, Hanson & Orth, the Erie Corporation, and the Commission Exportadora de Yucatan, besides Alvin W. Krech, chairman of the directors of the Equitable Trust Company, and several other individuals.

Wet and Dry Alignment

Senator Robert M. La Follette is the only wet candidate for president and as such expects to have a large vote from the wet element. The drys in Wisconsin, who are LaFollette followers are expected to vote for him anyway as in other years. Both Coolidge and Davis are unquestionably believers in the 15th amendment and the laws to enforce it.

In Wisconsin we have Blaine as a wet candidate endorsed by the liquor interests early in this campaign while two years ago they waited for the very end of the campaign before covering the state with advertisements advocating Blaine as a wet governor. A. R. Hirst, candidate against Blaine, is unquestionably for law enforcement and the preservation of the 18th amendment. Mr. Cummings, opponent of Blaine within the ranks of the LaFollette outfit, is openly dry. The socialist candidate for governor is wet personally and in platform.

Herman Sachtlein, Blaine's appointed for prohibition commissioner, a joke appointment in itself, is a candidate for the assembly in Dane county with the understanding that he will make the battle for speaker should he be elected. He was the wet leader in 1923.

In this district, Mr. Cooper was once placed with the dry advocates. Since he has gone body, soul and breeches to the LaFollette camp, it is not so certain. For how can a man be dry and support a notorious wet? Charles Pfennig, republican candidate for congress, is dry and may be relied upon in congress to give support to the 18th amendment. In this legislative district, George W. Blanchard has clearly aligned himself on the dry side of the question.

The alignment will not be overlooked. The liquor interests know no party and no politics other than booze. "Bringing back the saloons" is the underlying principle of the liquor partisans. It behooves the friends of prohibition to be awake and vote their belief—the other side will do so with a certainty.

We have an international league for peace and "freedom." It is, however, a fact of history that we achieved freedom by fighting with muskets and cannon, not by peace.

The Child Labor Amendment

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN.

Washington, D. C.—The constitutional amendment on child labor, now being considered by state legislatures, is much misunderstood. Some people have the strange idea that if the amendment is ratified by three-fourths of the states, congress will at once prohibit every person under 18 years of age from working. Others think that federal legislation will make it impossible for a mother to ask her daughter to wipe the dinner dishes. And a great many people think that the amendment makes definite provision for the protection of child laborers.

Yet the facts are simple enough. The resolution for the amendment, which was passed by both houses of congress, states briefly: "The congress shall have power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age." A second paragraph explains with equal brevity that state laws and regulations are not to be affected except insofar as they conflict with federal legislation.

The proposed twentieth amendment to the constitution thus only gives congress the power to make laws regarding child labor. Twice congress thought that it possessed that power, because on two occasions a majority of the senators and representatives approved federal child labor measures. But each time the supreme court declared the law unconstitutional. In one case four supreme court justices agreed with congress that it had the right to pass laws affecting child labor, but five thought otherwise, and the duty of seeing that children are not exploited was left entirely to the states.

The slow business of ratifying the proposed amendment has been so slow that Congress and Louisiana legislators have collected it. Arkansas has ratified it. Iowa is expected to call a special session of its legislature shortly.

The strongest objection to the amendment is made by states' rights enthusiasts. They say that the states can and will protect their own children. This is true to some extent, but the states are sometimes caught in inconsistent attitudes. The Children's Bureau reports that the same Louisiana legislature which rejected the federal amendment in 1908, in 1912, passed a bill which would have made it unlawful for children in the state to work longer than nine hours a day and 54 hours a week. The law which this bill was intended to supersede permits children to work 10 hours a day and 60 hours a week.

Forty-two of the state legislatures will meet in 1925. Until then there is no possibility of gaining approval from the necessary 36 states. In the meantime child labor reform may not be exactly at a standstill. Much of the benefit of any federal law about child labor is indirect. The two federal child labor laws now on the books—enacted in 1916 and 1919—were not enforced long, but because of them child labor was made a live subject. Throughout the country local conditions were publicly known and discussed.

As a result, most legislatures, and some cities as well, improved local regulations in one way or another. Boys and girls under 18 were prohibited from working at night in some states. Children were prohibited from engaging in any kind of dangerous or unhealthy work. Between 1900 and 1920, 22 states passed laws providing for the part time education of employed children during their working hours.

To a large extent each state now protects its child workers in some ways and yet retained some loose laws which permit exploitations.

In urging congress to approve the amendment, the judiciary committee of the house said: "The reasons why federal legislation in this field was first sought were: First, because in some states a single industry was so powerful as to prevent the passage of a law; second, because child labor law or the enforcement of one after it was passed; second, because consumers had come to feel a moral repugnance to the use of the products of child labor; third, because manufacturers objected to the competition of those who relied upon the low wages of children as the basis of their profits; and finally, because states found themselves unable to protect not only their consumers and the manufacturers but their citizenship. For after all, children who suffered from the educational, physical and spiritual losses which premature child labor brings could migrate to any state, so that the citizenship of no state was secure against the neglect of another state."

These arguments are not yet out of date. Furthermore, congress has found a brand new reason for national legislation in its discovery that penalties for breaking state laws are being cleverly dodged by interstate operators. Work is shipped from employers in one state to children in another. In a recent investigation in a New Jersey case more than 1,000 children under 14 years of age were found doing sweat shop work at home under dangerously insanitary conditions and for starvation wages. Much of the work came from factories in nearby states.

Secretary of Labor Davis finds that only 13 states measure in all particulars to the standards set by the federal law which was declared unconstitutional in 1922. He said recently, "In a number of states the employment of children under 14 years is permitted under conditions which in a general way rank with the requirements of Japan, China and India."

We hear a great deal about labor's campaign for the eight-hour day and the 44-hour week, yet in three states children under 14 can work nine hours a day; in six states they can work ten hours a day; in one state 11 hours a day; and one state sets no legal limitation at all.

That children not only "can" but that they do work to the limit that the law allows is shown by innumerable surveys and reports. In the 1920 census more than a million children between 10 and 15 years inclusive were rated as materially contributing to the incomes of families. Statistics regarding child workers under 14 years were not compiled, but the fact that the law was taken at a compromise, and that it is believed by government officials that the number of child workers is much greater now.

Many of these children are at work for a comparatively short time after school hours. More than half of the million work on their parents' farms, some doing part time work, some full time. Some farm work is in no way injurious to the children and does not affect their education. Obviously such work will not be affected by state or federal legislation.

But there are nearly half a million children who work in beet fields and cranberry bogs and cotton fields, in silk mills and clothing and furniture factories. Children from five to 14 years string beads and put tags on articles at home, earning from one to 25 cents an hour. In one survey of three cities, five cents was found to be the maximum that the majority of the children doing this home work could earn in an hour. It is true that many of the children who work at home or in factories for pay are engaged for short periods of time, but it is also true that a great many parents send their children out to work at what authorities consider injurious manual labor, for half a day or even for the full day permitted by the state.

Children who engage in hard work outside of school hours are more apt to fall behind in their school work than other children, statistics show. They are reported as being dull and listless. Often their eyes are weak or overstrained from working in the hot sun and under poor lights. There is no significance in the fact that in the lowest advanced areas of child labor, literacy is most prevalent and the death rate is highest.

Federal legislation which might follow the ratification of the child labor amendment would probably be in line with the former federal laws. That is, the national law would be planned to establish general restrictions protecting child workers everywhere. The states would then add their own special laws to meet local conditions or to raise the standard of protection still further.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

WHEN ALL IS WELL AT HOME.
I met a rich man by the way, a man with wealth to boast.
Said I to him: "Come tell me, pray, what joy delights thee most?
What pleasure has this life to give, what mirth or merriment?
Best cheers thee the round of years you live and leave your soul content?"
"What is it makes a happy man?" he answered with a sigh
"I'll tell as quickly as I can, 'tis something gold can't buy."
"When they are well at home," said he, "then I am full content;
When I sit upon their cheeks I see I'm rich in merriment."
When they can dance and they can sing and they can romp in play,
When I can hear their laughter ring that is my happy day.
But when the fever burns their cheeks, and fitsfully they sigh,
"Tis then through dreary days and weeks a downcast man am I."
"Through rich or poor," his truth I tell, contentment none can know
Save "health the roof" where he may dwell are eyes with love lit glow.
The heart must join the lips that smile, the mind must be at ease,
Or pleasure has no charm worth while which mortal man can see.
Whoever he, his truth he'll hold wherever he may roam;
No man can come to peace of mind save all is well at home."

HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, AUGUST 1, 1924.

Astrologers read this as a doubtful day, since Mars in male aspect dominates it. Neptune exercises adverse power during the afternoon hours, and the influence of the planet is to be felt. All the influences appear to tend toward disturbing conditions of the mind which will be reflected in material ways.

Men will stress their grievances rather than their blessings, and for that reason much trouble will develop in business and politics.

The personal element will be emphasized. In all dealing among men and women, selfishness and greed being more apparent than ever before.

Instead of harmony, dissensions will multiply. For the physical world will mirror the chaotic condition of minds that should be steadfast, but instead are unsteady.

Many warlike conditions appear to be gradually focusing and these will be manifested first in internal troubles in many nations.

As previously prophesied the national political campaign will become more and more confusing as the autumn approaches. Bitter feeling will increase instead of diminishing, the gears predict.

Neptune is in an aspect supposed to make the mind become keen, but wherever wrongs are to be detected and dull wherever there should be recognition of the universal brotherhood.

The evening of this day should be favorable to labor meetings and there is a sign presaging good power for industrial organizations.

Again the aged and all past middle life come under a sway making for renewed activities. The young should be inclined to seek their counsel.

One month is said to be under solar currents that tend to stagnate trade. Business men should be conservative in their policies.

Depression in certain mercantile activities may be expected, but it should not be serious.

Persons whose health is in jeopardy are the augury of a year in which it will be well to keep all family affairs in order. Success in business is indicated.

Children born on this day are likely to be nervous, lively, energetic, but exceedingly quick. These subjects of fate are often endowed with musical talent. Girls should marry most fortunately.

LOOKING BACKWARD

FORTY YEARS AGO

July 31, 1884.—The pupils of Miss Helen R. Porter will give a recital at her music rooms, 12 Lehigh street, tonight. Elsie White, Lucy Graves, Lena Walker, Thelma Andrews, Adele Best, Dollie Best, Lucy Larson, Maud Myers, Carrie Huginlin, Florence Soverhill, Lillie Knoff and Grace Beardsley are among those to take part.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

July 31, 1894.—One of the water wheels in the electric power plant has been broken, shutting down one dynamo, and leaving the streets on the east side of the city in darkness. The new lights have just been installed, and have scarcely been used on that side of town. They will be in service in a day or two.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

July 31, 1904.—The first annual tournament of the Janesville Gun club was held at Athletic park yesterday afternoon, and the high score for the afternoon was awarded to William McVicar, who missed 24 out of a possible 35. Eugene Roseling was the score keeper. Seventeen visitors from near-by cities took part.

July 31, 1914.—A score or more of Janesville residents who are touring in Europe this summer face slender chances of reaching the United States for some time in case a general war is declared, owing to the fact that the big ocean liners will be pressed into naval service by their national governments.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author.

MRS. JACK SPRATT ANNOUNCES

It is for the good of their health. If Mrs. J. B. S. had reported merely that she had reduced 37 pounds in three months, that would not have been interesting at all. But I call to the attention of fat folks who have no backbone the portions of Mrs. Spratt's report—Spratt isn't the name, really, but it fits the family, doesn't it?—in which she tells how her "rheumatism," "stomach trouble," "nervousness" and headaches have cleared up since she began to live wisely. Mrs. Spratt, like thousands of her unhappy sisters, had been fat behind on metabolism—she was storing much more fuel than she could burn or more than she did burn. Now her's is a little crumb of advice. When one walks two miles an hour, metabolism increases to three times the resting rate; at four miles an hour, which is faster than most people can walk, the metabolism increases to five times the resting rate. It is a fine way to burn off the superfluous or slacker flesh.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Breaking Out.
I have inherited syphilis. Doctors have said it is not curable. I get spots on my body that are not there. I have been told there are sulphur springs I could go to and have it boiled out of my system. Please let me know if that is possible. (A. A.)
Answer.—I think you may have inherited syphilis. It is just as curable as acquired syphilis, but though some doctors say it is not, it is not amenable to treatment.

Aura of Migraine.
My wife has suffered repeatedly of late as follows: A sensation of continuing bright dots before the eyes, followed by a severe headache, which is usually quite well. Can you make a suggestion? (M. J. B.)
Answer.—That is the usual warning signal of a migraine seizure—an attack of periodic sick headaches. It should be signified also, for a health examination by your physician, now, before the trouble becomes entrenched.

Another Victim of Quack Thinking.
Not knowing the danger, I went to a lady, who said she had a cure for the beauty specialist to inject something he called "human oil" into my face. She said it was very good, and there are five very unsightly red bumps. I have consulted a number of doctors about this, but they all say it is nothing but a quack remedy. I am sure it is not, but nothing seems to do any good. Can you give me any information? (G. C.)
Answer.—Russian oil is another name for paraffin oil, liquid petrolatum. It is not a cure for anything, and I am sorry I can suggest no relief for you. I have repeatedly warned readers of this paper of the danger of any kind of surgical treatment or manipulation at the hands of persons who are not properly trained. Your best course now is to consult a reputable physician or surgeon who is a skin specialist, who does not believe in "human oil" or "Russian oil," and he guided by his advice. Haven't you an actionable claim for damages against the person or firm who injected the "oil"? It was no doubt illegal practice of surgery. These factors are permitted in the hands of quacks and unscrupulous with contempt for the law.

MISTRESS WILDING:

A ROMANCE, BY RAFAEL SABATINI.

(Author of "Sourmouche," "Captain Blood," "Fortune's Fool," etc.)

She hastened through the lighted streets never heeding the young cobbles that hurt her feet. She was in a hurry, and she was alone. The crowd that thronged her way. All Bridgewater was astir with Monmouth's presence; more over, there had been great incursions from Fainton and the surrounding country. The women-folk of the Duke-King's followers having come that day to Bridgewater to say farewell to father and son, husband and brother, before the army marched—as was still believed—to Gloucester.

The half-hour was striking from Saint Mary's, the church in which Ruth had been married. She reached the door of the sign of the Ship. She was about to knock, when suddenly it opened, and Mr. Wilding himself, with a look of surprise, immediately behind him, stood confronting her. At sight of him a momentary weakness took her. He had changed from his hard-featured, sternly handsome man of rough, corded black silk, which threw into relief the sleek thinness of his spare figure. His dark brown hair was carefully dressed, and his eyes, which had been so cold and stern, were now warm and friendly. He was, in fact, a different man from the one who had stood before her in the passage back upon her white face.

"Mr. Wilding," said she, her heart fluttering in her throat, "May I... may I speak with you?"

He stepped forward, seeking to place the shadows of her white face, as he thought he recognized the voice, as his sudden start had shown, and so he disbelieved his ears. She moved her head at that moment, and the light streaming out from a lamp in the passage back upon her white face.

"That," he cried, and came quickly forward, Trembling, behind him, looked on and scowled with sudden impatience. Mr. Wilding's pliant face, which had never had the old rakes' approval, too much trouble already had resulted from them.

"I must speak with you at once. At once," she urged him, her tone fearful.

"Are you in need of me?" he asked, unconcernedly.

"In very urgent need," said she. "Thank God," he answered without flinching. "You shall find me at your service. Tell me."

"Not here; not here," she answered to him.

"Where else?" said he. "Shall we walk?"

"No, no." Her repetition marked the deep excitement that possessed her. "I will go in with you." And she signed with her hand towards the door from which he was barely emerged.

"The scarce fitting," said he, for being confused and full of speculation on the score of her need, he had for the moment almost overlooked the relations in ceremony through which they had gone together. Mr. Wilding still mostly thought of her as of a mistress very difficult to win.

"Fitting," she echoed, and then after a pause, "Am I not your wife?" she asked him in a low voice, her cheeks crimsoned.

"From honour," he had almost forgot, said he, and though the burden of his words seemed mocking, the tone was sad.

"That," he said, and then after a pause, "Am I not your wife?" she asked him in a low voice, her cheeks crimsoned.

YOUR BABY AND MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Mrs. Eldred is happy to advise all mothers about the care of their children of any age, or on any subject which does not belong in the field of the doctor.

Answer to Mrs. I. H. L. L. You must realize that if you are in the condition you think you are no one can do anything for you. Such action is tantamount to murder. Perhaps you are only worried and nervous and every symptom you have could be explained by the approach of a natural function. You tend to be irregular during the gestation period and I would try to be calm and forget your worries until they are confirmed by some more positive signs.

Answer: The baby has not gained as very well considering her large birth weight. From her actions I think she is undoubtedly hungry.

Give her one and one-half ounces of water and one ounce of whole cow's milk and let her suckle after each nursing. Do not stuff her with water. The extra nourishment she gets ought to help the constipation also, though she can have orange juice, lemonade, diluted, with the same amount of water one hour before her morning nursing. The reason she cries at the breast is because she is not getting enough from it.

Answer: There could be no possible harm in continuing the treatments. Thank you for your interest in the department.

Heart and Home Problems

By ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

STOLEN SWEETHEART

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I was going with a fellow about four months and he was a very nice fellow. We were out for a ride and took him away from me. We did not speak for two months and then we went back together again. But I am not together again and so I left him for good. Did I do right in leaving him? I was going with another boy and she told him a lot of lies and has come out with him. What shall I do? This girl has a bad name.

The first fellow wants to come back. Shall I go back to him or not? I am 18 years old.

BROKENHEARTED LITTLE

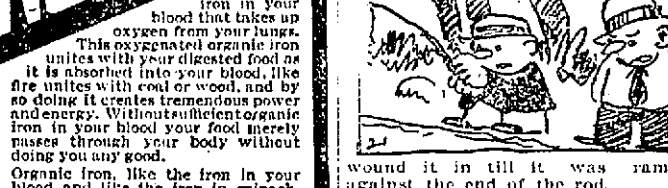

It is quite a pleasant surprise to have one girl take two of your friends away from you. I think, however, that the less you do about the matter the better it will be in the end. If you like the first young man, I think him worthy of your friendship, let him come back.

HE WINKS AND SMILES

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There is a boy whom I met quite often on the street and every time he winks and smiles. This has been going on for quite a while and I would like to know if he would like to get acquainted. I think I would, and since that is the case, how should I start it? It wouldn't start much to say, "How do you do?" What I want is a conversation with him. He seems very nice. I would like to know if it is to be questioned if the boy is a "Naked" fellow.

Dinner Stories

The novice at trout fishing had hooked a very small trout, and had would sit in till it was rammed against the end of the rod.

"What do I do now?" asked the pupil.

"Climb the rod and stab it," was the instructor's naive reply.

Two clubwomen were discussing the old familiar topic, "What do you think of the new dress?" "That, denizens from the moon, sometimes moor cases to floating objects. These cases are to be picked up later."

"In other words, it is much like going to certain hotels," "As to how?" "You can get the stuff if you find the right bell-boy."

VARI-COLORED HENNA

Several readers who are most anxious to darken early gray hairs write me to ask why they can't use the henna-pyrrole acid and lemon juice combination for coloring gray hairs brown. Last week, you will remember, I said to have your hair-dresser do this for you.

There are a lot of reasons why I advise you not to do this for yourself. It is awkward to apply the paste evenly to the head, it is impossible if you are inexperienced to know how long it should stay on, and whether or not it should be kept hot on the head. It is impossible to know whether you should have Egyptian, Indian or Syrian henna. It is not even possible to give exact proportions of the henna and other ingredients, for it will vary in the case of every individual head, and the better the color more readily than coarse, and so on. Some years ago I experimented with these known harmless ingredients and finally gave it up as a failed effort. If the hair-dresser is wrong through a woman's carelessness or natural inexperience it will alter the resulting color of her hair, and when success or failure depends on the slightest alteration of shade it is not a case for experimenting at home.

All I can say to you is that henna by itself produces an Auburn color with the juice of one lemon added it tends toward brown; with a pinch of pyrogallol acid powder proper, brown; with powdered indigo, very dark brown or black. The better the paste the more quickly the color takes, the longer it stays on the head the more intense the color becomes; the other the scalp, the more resistance there is to the paste. The warmer the weather, the more quickly the color takes. It is too involved for you to try yourself. But a professional, knowing the state of your scalp and the fineness of your hair, can apply this paste properly for you. And it is a harmless way of overcoming grayness.

S. J. M.—It is not unusual for one side of the body to be larger than the other, and this is particularly so in the case of feet, hands or the bust.

Increase your weight and the hollow between the shoulder blades and the fineness of your hair can apply this paste properly for you. And it is a harmless way of overcoming grayness.

THANK YOU—I have said many times that I do not give out addresses.

COULD NOT WALK BECAUSE OF PAIN

Bad Case of Woman's Illness Remedied by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Louis, Mo.—"I had such a bad case of female trouble that I could not walk because of pain from inflammation. My back was all ached up stairs because of weakness, and no one could possibly be in worse shape than I was. I have taken 12 boxes of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am a strong woman now and can work down as well as up. They wonder how I can do so much work. I dare say that I have recommended your medicine to a thousand women. A little book was thrown at my door, and that is how I first learned of it."—Mrs. D. M. BEAUCHAMP, 1104 Morrison Avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

It doesn't make much difference what one says—whether one regularly reads the Classified ads is what really matters.

If you have any little creepy doubts about this—suppose you read the Classified ads for a little while today—now—this very instant!
